

ANNAPOLIS PARK HISTORIC DISTRICT

WESTLAND

The Annapolis Park Historic District in Westland has been nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. The 354-property neighborhood of ranch houses developed in the 1953-57 period possesses exceptional historic significance among the vast amount of suburban residential development around Detroit's edges. Built in the early post World War II era, it is a neighborhood of well-built modern housing intended from the first for African Americans. A Westland historian and several neighborhood residents provided historical documentation and the SHPO prepared the nomination materials. The Annapolis Park district will be listed in the national register during spring 2006.
